formed the task of the biography of Andrew Jackson so well as Mr. Parton."

The Independent Democrat says:

"The book before us is a history as well as biography. In giving a surrative of incidents and events in the life of Andrew Jackson, our author necessarily gives much of the history of the entire period in which his hero rived. Such a man could not be separated either from the events or the men with whom he was connected."

It is complete in all its parts."

The Eridge port Advertiser and Farmer says:

"In it will be found many facts and exciting incidents in American Listory which have never before been collected in book form. It is a work which will be valuable to refer to, and should be in every library."

The Washington States and Union says:

"We strongly commend it to the country, especially to the politicians of the country, as the record of a life whose garity and patriotism needs to be imitated."

The boston Traveller says:

"This history is especially desirable now, when the battle which President Jackson fought and won for the time—the battle for the Union—has been renewed."

A great mass of similar testimony might be produced coming from all sections of the country.
